INROADS ON RESERVES

THEY WERE THE GENERAL TOPIC OF WALL-STREET DISCUSSION.

Had Little Effect, However, on General Speculative Sentiment-A Poor Week in Local Trade.

At New York Saturday money on call was steady at 21/2 per cent.

Prime mercantile paper, 5@5% per cent. Sterling exchange was steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.84% for demand and $4.81%@4.81% for sixty days; posted rates, $4.82@4.821 and $4.86@4.861; commercial bills,

Bar silver was 64%c; silver certificates, 64%@ 6514c; Mexican dollars, 50%c. Silver bars on the London market sold at 29%d an ounce. The exports of gold and silver from the port of New York to all countries for the week aggregated $1,140,039 in silver bars and coin and $12,000

Imports of specie were $15,087 in gold and $23,

The imports of dry goods and merchandise were valued at $10,327,529. The weekly statement of the associated New York banks, issued Saturday, shows the follow-

The Financier says: "The banks of New York, St. Paul ....... 3.850 the week more than 50 per cent. of the surplus reholdings having been in the neighborhood of the majority of the banks in the clearing hou have undergone no serious drain on their sources, although quite a number are now close to the legal reserve point and some of them below it. The present statement would not have looked so serious had it not been for the almost stationary loan column. While there is nothing to warrant the assertion, it appears as though there had been a period of active borrowing during the week, not previously known. now is to contract loans, and the small decrease for the week compares oddly with the decrease of the two weeks previous. The dwindling reserve does not mean, necessarily, a stringency in the market. It emphasizes the fact that money is going to remain firm over election rise in rates will lead to renewed talk gold imports, but nobody regards the occasion serious enough to call for shipments of species to this side, although if a small profit can be shown the current may turn this way again. The most curious phase of the situation, tively, is what would have happened had it not been for the greatly enlarged volume of national bank currency within the year."

WALL STREET REVIEW Attention centered on the bank statement on the interior drain of currency, which Friday, when the movement to the interior was known to have been large, the maximum esti-mate of the decline in cash did not reach 10,000,000. The large payment of Pacific gold trafts last week was expected to moderate that owing, under the system of computations by daily averages, but, instead of that, the loss cash for the week was run up to $8,574,700. and the remaining surplus of the banks is cut The interior demand for cash has been and far in excess of any single week in the fail of the bank statement, must be due to the inviction that the heavy movement of cotton the seaboard insures a continuance of the to this country, probably the coming week. On the other hand, London must meet an installment on the khaki loan subscription the coming week, and on the following Monday a 25 per cent, installment of the British exchequer bond is due from American subscribers. The requirement thus created on the London money market and the New York sterling exchange market must be balanced against the supply of cotton At Bo short contracts on the fise, and the professional operators, who have the advance in hand, evidently hope to dislodge the long standing short interest, which has persisted in the stock market on the theory that the business reaction will continue and warrant further shrinkage of prices. The bull party is evidently playing also to attract an outside buying movement of the class which nothing but a rapid advance in prices brings into the stock market. The effort has not proved entirely successful, but the new buying was hardiy sufficient to absorb the profittaking by professionals, who sought to reduce taking by professionals, who sought to reduce their commitments at a moderate advance. The favorable incidents of the week have been made the most of by the bull leaders, but the loudest

BY MANIPULATION. The manipulative character of the market was evident from the number of assertions put in circulation on the Stock Exchange which failed of verification. A positive announcement tha the coal strike had been called off served its purpose in rushing prices up late in the day, and consolidations of railroad systems, while brokers vigorously bid up the stocks concerned with a palpable disinclination to avail themselves of lower prices to absorb the stocks. But it was notable that the advance thus secured did not bring out any heavy offerings from other than speculative holders, and price reactions were not severe even when the unveracious character of the reports was recognized. This undertone of firmness gave confidence to the bull

The hopeful views expressed by authorities in the iron and steel trade had a marked influence on the much depressed stocks in that group, and affected the general list favorably by sympathy. troversy with tin-plate workers gave relief to fears of labor troubles, and the expressed satisfaction of officials of some of the railroads which benefit by carriage of steel rails, with the price fixed by the makers, promised a line of orders in industry. The declaration of the regular quarterly dividend of 2 per cent. on Tennessee Coal ended a very bold bear campaign against the stock based on positive assertions, widely published, that the dividend would be reduced or passed. The subsequent rebound in the stock had a revivifying influence on all the stocks in the steel group. The placing of some large or-ders for freight cars was another element in the ome recent orders for liquidation of various stocks was a relief to the market, and facilitated the advance. The point probably most relied on by the bulls was the promise of early imports of gold, carried in the marked downward course of exchange under the continued flood of bills against heavy exports of cotton, and the apparent acquiescence of European money markets in the threatened movement of gold by refraining from advancing their discount rates. The retention of the Bank of England official rate at per cent., with the market rate fully up to that, went to confirm this conviction. This action, in face of the drastic inroads on banking resources, to meet the October quarterly settlements, revealed by the weekly statements of he Bank of England and the Imperial Bank of Germany, created the impression that the October settlements having been safely met, the foreign money markets did not feel constrained conserve their resources so strictly. Exchange bankers in New York did not indorse this view. and argued that the need for remittance on subscriptions to foreign loans, to which the Swedish loan subscriptions have been added during the week, would arrest the downward course of exchange this side of the gold-import point. The moderated reduction of the banks' surplus by reason of loan contraction, revealed by last week's bank statement and the hope of a favorable showing this week by reason of the offsets to the interior movement of currency have been a continuing influence. But a policy of conserving reserves by loan contraction is not one that is supposed to add to the comfort of speculative holders of securities, and mean-

LOCAL GRAIN AND PRODUCE.

Week in Which Trade Was Disappointing, but with Strong Prices.

Wholesale merchants were somewhat disapclosed Oct. 6. Low rates, on account of the Bryan meeting, prevailed three days of the favorable outcome of conditions over which the public at large is still evidently in doubt, especially a revival of business to last year's high level of prosperity.

for October, there were reasons for expecting a trisk trade. Commission row shared with the wholesale streets in the disappointment, as it nonths. During the week the principal break dropped another cent. In dry goods several advances were established, and the provision marng the week. The produce market ruled steady. Fresh eggs and good butter are in active request. The leather and hide markets are still steel markets are more active, with prices un-changed. Druggists are having a good business and prices on most articles are very firm.

The local grain market was fairly active all the week, fluctuations in prices on the track not the week, fluctuations in prices on the track not varying more than one cent, the decline of one day followed by an advance the next day. paniment to a Hungarian song of his own "I would like to be arrayed in silver and Beautiful and radiant for him to behold!" Yes, it is Rosalind singing. And yet, somehow, not the Rosalind we knew. There is all the old arch witchery of the forest rhymester, the merry sparkle, the dainty, rougish glance, the bewitching smile that held thousands under its spell in the old, old days. But surely that glorious volume of song did not belong to the Rosalind we knew. Some sweet singing fairy must have endowed our Mary with a wedding gift of song. But whence comes that warmth of feeling, vibrant and mellow as the song of the thrush? Visions of Galatea, cold as marble, fade into absurdity as that full rich voice fills the empty The cries of children playing outdoors become hushed. Workmen busy fixing up the wilderment. Miss Fanny Davies, the great planist, sitting on a chair behind us, leans forward to whisper, "Wonderful!" "But if he would love me better in linen Cheek and brow and milk-white arms al tanned and brown, would seek the sun's fiercer rays All the long midsummer days; And through all the sunny weather, Sweet the game we'd play together; Who Loves Best?"

There is no need to question further whence came the spark which has enkindled our Rosalind. Ingenuous as a sunbeam, the nut-brown songstress is singing straight to the courtly gentleman sitting beside me. He smiles a knightly recognition of his beautiful wife's homage and presently hurries forward to assist her from the platform. Seats for the concert have been selling for ten shillings, seven and sixpence, five shillings, two shillings and one shilling. These are unheard of prices for Evesham. And all for a charity, too, something connected with the monastery over at Broadway village, where the name Navarro is one to conjure with; and Court Farm. where the Navarros live, is a magnet for rusticating artists and other people of the London world. Of the performance itself, I hardly dare speak, criticism not being my

The piece de resistance, as the critics would say, was beyond question Mme. De Navarro herself. Gowned in black lace she came upon the platform smiling recognition here and there to friends in the audience. And the way the back benches cheered brought back recollections of triumphs where thousands had cheered themselves hoarse in like manner. A little playful controversy with Mr. Korbay as to where she should stand, and then @4; winter straights, $3.55@3.65; winter extras, Rosalind's glance falls on Orlando in the fifth row of chairs and she begins to

As a matter of fact, it was a revelation to everybody. Whoever suspected that the newspapers had been so egregiously misbut toward the close of the week, with better competition, choice stock sold at more satisfactory prices. The demand from local killers has been living these ten years in Broadway village close by. Only a prima donna could sing like that, and not many prima donne even could sing with that freshness of voice so suggestive of singing in a village choir. Yet it could hardly be a prima donna who responded so freely time and again with encore after encore. And surely pefore us all laughing mischievously while her planist and "trainer" wished her to sing one song while she insisted on singing another. Just how many songs she sang I cannot tell. The programme said five. With encores to each that would mean how, it was one long sunny afternoon of song, brought all too soon to a close by the inexorable train time. After the performance was over everybody wanted to crush into the waiting room behind the platform to say "Thank you." "That last number was just too much for me," she said, the suspicion of a tear in her laughing eyes. "It was the music from 'A Winter's Tale." When I made my first appearance in London years ago they were playing it as I went on the stage. And stranger still the musicians who played then were the same. And this is positively my last appearance in public." Half an hour later we are all sitting at a luncheon at the Crown Hotel. And such a laughing, merry party, too. Mme. De Navarro is the life and soul of the table. Now she is telling us that Chicago is called Sheecawgo: that she has only had six singing lessons in her life; that her "trainer," as she playfully calls Mr. Korbay at her elbow, will not even allow her a glass of wine at luncheon till she has made her debut; that her little son is just four years old, and is the dearest little fellow on earth; that I really must drive over to Broadway to see him before returning to London: that the little thing she ever refused her husband was a promise to practice singing half an hour every day-and so forth and so on.

The Summer Stock. New York Evening Sun. If the question, "What dress detail has been most characteristic of the summer?" might be put to women collectively, a grand chorus, without a dissenting voice. must go up of "the transparent stock." Not only is this detail so general and so becoming, but it is most comfortable. What with it, and the many frocks boasting no stock at all, the summer has been an unusual one for comfort. Women accustomed to swathe their throats in sweltering silk nothingness of the transparent stock, or gone with throats bare altogether. It was indeed lucky that the sunspots-that the scientists say were the cause of the exressive heat this season-and the no-collar signs that fall frocks, even of cloth, will pay much less attention to covering throat than formerly. We may not look forward to decollette tailor-made suits, perhaps (or, at least, not just yet), but with-out doubt the long-established mode of more comfortable, and, from the artistic viewpoint, more beautiful style of dressing the neck. No true artist will consent to paint a portrait, nor even to take a photo-graph, of a subject whose nock is confined in the one-time high, tight stock, which, until very recently, has been so indis-pensable-
